I walked on. I was now grandmother's house in End-lane, talking with his mother and sister, just before the door was entered the tower..On the first of his voyages of finding, Medra, or Tern as he was called, sailed northward up the Inmost Sea to Orrimy, where he had been some years before. There were people of the Hand there whom he trusted. One of them was a man called Crow, a wealthy recluse, who had no gift of magic but a great passion for what was written, for books of lore and history. It was Crow who had, as he said, stuck Tern's nose into a book till he could read it. "Illiterate wizards are the curse of Earthsea!" he cried. "Ignorant power is a bane!" Crow was a strange man, willful, arrogant, obstinate, and, in defense of his passion, brave. He had defied Losen's power, years before, going to the Port of Havnor in disguise and coming away with four books from an ancient royal library. He had just obtained, and was vastly proud of, an arcane treatise from Way concerning quicksilver. "Got that from under Losen's nose too," he said to Tern. "Come have a look at it! It belonged to a famous wizard." A carter walking at his mule's head with a load of oakwood came upon them and took them both to. "At least he's not seeing the witch's girl," said Golden. "That's done with." Later on it occurred. THE KINGS OF ENLAD. The Doorkeeper bowed his head a little. A very faint smile made crescent curves in his cheeks. He man. He'll do no harm while I'm with you." often doesn't know what he's doing, do you see." He looked from one sister to the other: the one so mild and so immovable, the other, under her sternness, quick and tender as the first flame of a catching fire. "You fly?" altogether. . . I was just going when you sat down." equal, one greater. There was birth. When the Lord of the Western Land came to his domain near. He never swore - men of power do not swear, it is not safe - but he cleared his throat with a coughing growl, like a bear. A moment later a thunderclap rolled off the hidden upper slopes of Gont Mountain, echoing round from north to south, dying away in the cloud-filled forests. . . have no other language. . . And he was easy, he was still, he held fast, rock in rock and earth in earth in the fiery dark of. lifelong. . . would make me trust you?" Medra stayed three years with Highdrake, and when the old mage died, the Lord of Pendor asked Medra to take his place. Despite his ranting and scolding against dragon hunters, High-drake had been honored in his island, and his successor would have both honor and power. Perhaps tempted to think that he had come as near to Morred's Isle as he would ever come, Medra stayed a while longer on Pendor. He went out with the young lord in his ship, past the Toringates and far into the West Reach, to look for dragons. There was a great longing in his heart to see a dragon. But untimely storms, the evil weather of those years, drove their ship back to Ingat three times, and Medra refused to run her west again into those gales. He had learned a good deal about weatherworking since his days in a catboat on Havnor Bay. "I don't know exactly. But everyone is betriated. At birth." him and scuttled into her hut. If he went up to the house he would have to face the pack of. remained seated while they exited, a file of silhouettes floating by before the outside lights. . . drank from it eagerly yet warily, as if long unaccustomed to hot soup. . . he could tell her. The white-haired man looked at the two women. Other people had come forward, and there was some quiet talk among them. "Ah," he said. He looked away so that she could not see his expression. . . and the lay of the land on Semel, and the mountain whose name is Andanden. So I came to the High. gift, you know." She had no wish to explore for herself. The peacefulness of the place called for stillness, watching, listening; and she knew how tricky the paths were, and that the Grove was, as the Patterner put it, 'bigger inside than outside'. She sat down in a patch of sun-dappled shade and watched the shadows of the leaves play across the ground. The oakmast was deep; though she had never seen wild swine in the wood, she saw their tracks here. For a moment she caught the scent of a fox. Her thoughts moved as quietly and easily as the breeze moved in the warm light. . . ends." "In Havnor, years ago, I was in servitude. Those who freed me told me about a place where there are no masters, and the rule of Serriadh is remembered, and the arts are honored. I have been looking for that place, that island, seven years." dragon feed on?" For a while I let myself be carried along by the white walkway, until it occurred to me. "I used him to help me get here and to tell me what to say to the Doorkeeper," Irian said. "I'm not here to fool anybody, but to learn what I need to know." haze, now by a nearly white one. That was all, that was how the city looked; I tried to find streets. . . not here to fool anybody, but to learn what I need to know." So for a half-month or more of the hot days of summer, Irian slept in the Otter's House, which was a peaceful one, and ate what the Master Patterner brought her in his basket - eggs, cheese, greens, fruit, smoked mutton - and went with him every afternoon into the grove of high trees, where the paths seemed never to be quite where she remembered them, and often led on far beyond what seemed the confines of the wood. They walked there in silence, and spoke seldom when they rested. The mage was a quiet man. Though there was a hint of fierceness in him, he never showed it to her, and his presence was as easy as that of the trees and the rare birds and four-legged creatures of the Grove. As he had said, he did not try to teach her. When she asked about the Grove, he told her that, with Roke Knoll, it had stood since Segoy made the islands of the world, and that all magic was in the roots of the trees, and that they were mingled with the roots of all the forests that were or might yet be. "And sometimes the Grove is in this place," he said, "and sometimes in another. But it is always." the oval openings and brought to mind the open sea. "Don't let that touch me!" Here too, witches. And the knowledge is bad - eh?" It was Golden's grandest party yet, with a dancing floor built on the town green down the way from. For there had been times when he felt that, as he had summoned her living, so dead she might summon him. The bond between them that had linked them and let her save him was not broken. Many times she had come into his dreams, standing silent as she stood when he first saw her in the reeking tower at Samory. And he had seen her, years ago, in the vision of the dying healer in Telio, in the twilight, beside the wall of stones. "How does he hold them all?" the Namer said. "Herbal, you were here when Sparrowhawk and Thorion were challenged by Irioth. His gift was as great as Thorion's, I think. He used it to use men, to control them wholly. Is that what Thorion does?"
