He looked up; the Patternner was coming towards them, mostly older students; there were five or six wizard's staffs among the crowd, and the Master. He recognized Hound, though he could not sit up and could barely speak. The old man put his own jacket around his shoulders and gave him water from his flask. Then he squatted beside him, his back against the immense trunk of the oak, and stared into the forest for a while. It was late morning, hot, the summer sunlight filtering through the leaves in a thousand shades of green. A squirrel scolded, far up in the oak, and a jay replied. Hound scratched his neck and sighed. "The Hand, say he is right. And as King Lebannen is one returned from death, fulfilling that the witch "the wisewoman," but a witch was a witch and her daughter was no fit companion for way to come. And you have no wizards in the Kargish lands, I think." "I'll bring food," he said, and strode on, quickening his pace so that he vanished soon, though not so abruptly as the Namer, in the light and shadow under the trees. Irian watched till he was certainly gone and then made her way through high grass and weeds to the little house. The king left soon after, and the Master Windkey went with him. Before the king was to be crowned, they went to Gont and sought our lord, to find what that meant, "a woman on Gont". Eh? But they did not see him, only my countrywoman Tenar of the Ring. She said she was not the woman they sought. And they found no one, nothing. So Lebannen judged it to be a prophecy yet to be fulfilled. And in Havnor he set his crown on his own head. "Where shall we go?" asked the girl. She still held me by the arm. She slackened her pace. He helped her stand. He made no spell to protect or hide them. His strength had been used up.
